A small area requirement and an ascent via stairs

In the Basic series, you will find play systems in many different varieties. Bard is one of the smallest play towers with stairs, a slide and a floor height of 90 cm. Do you want the same model, but with a more challenging ascent via a rope ladder? Then have a look at our LB100 Birk play tower.

Bard gives you the most basic play activities for a small playground area, but at the same time it has one of the elements which brings the most excitement at a playground – the slide.

Stairs lead the children to the floor of the play tower, from where they can enjoy the view of the rest of the playground before gathering up the courage for a trip down the slide. This model is especially suitable for younger children as the stairs ensure that even children at the age of two can enjoy the trips down the slide. Here they can easily move up the steps and grab hold of the handles on the sides.

High-speed fun and learning

The slide is a well-known favourite on the playground, which children rarely can get enough of. The repeating trips down the slide do not only bring smiles and excitement, they also help the children to improve their gross motor skills and balance. On top of that, the children also get better at judging distance and speed, as well as get a feel for gravity.
